

Nature's Inventions belong to all Humanity

Photo: Black Egret or Black Heron (South Africa) shading with its feathers to attract fish. Derek Keats

To take over the inventions, innovations, discoveries, evolutions, advances made by Nature in the form of a patent in order to appropriate what belongs to everyone is no longer possible.

What has been developed through millennia of testing, or even more, through variations, deviations, what constitutes all forms of life today, whether as plants or animals in the broadest sense, cannot belong to one person or one company.

All the ideas or functioning based on Nature can only be put to the benefit of all Humanity via Universal Inventions.